Description

On 31 October 1517 Martin Luther openly challenged the Roman Catholic Church, marking the 'official' beginning of the Protestant Reformation. The central message of the the Reformation was the need for a personal relationship with Jesus. It also resulted in the Bible being translated into numerous languages.

Almost simultaenously two other major movements began: the formation of the Ottoman Turkish Empire, and the age of discovery when the European maqritime nations sought direct action to the regions of India and the East.

This documentary looks at four significant events throughout history, all of which fell on the date of 31 October. All four events are connected. Is it mere coincidence or is there more to it?

31 October 1517 – the Reformation under Martin Luther at Wittenberg in Germany

31 October 1898 – the visit of Kaiser Wilhelm II to Jerusalem

31 October 1917 – the Balfour Declaration in London

31 October 1917 – the Allied victory in Beersheba

Description

Breaking the Silence: The Amish and the Reformation is a perilous and redemptive journey into the Amish people's past. It presents a respectfully honest view of the origins and legacy of the Amish and how they became who they are today.

Featuring the story of Lester and Rebecca Graber's salvation, excommunication, and exit from the Amish church, this film traces the Graber family and the Amish church back to the Reformation Era.

But it doesn't stop there. This film includes interviews with over a dozen people who have left the Amish as well as church leaders and historians from Switzerland. One of the primary messages that the film presents is the power of God's Word in the lives of those who read it.

Description

Visionary filmmaker Rolf Forsberg's impressionistic and often mind-boggling short films were seen by millions on the big screen, in classrooms, and in churches during the 1960s and 70s. Many recall Forsberg's cinematic spiritual explorations for their audacity and stark images. Here are four Forsberg masterworks, each introduced by the filmmaker himself:

Parable (1964) 23 min. — Forsberg's critically acclaimed, controversial Parable was the main attraction at the Protestant and Orthodox Pavilion of the 1964 New York World's Fair. A mysterious clown in all white attire appears as a Christ-like figure to redeem a circus. Restored to its original widescreen format.

The Antkeeper (1966) 28 min. — The story of mankind is represented by a gardener, his son, the wicked one, and a world populated by ants. Drawing inspiration from the works of Fellini and Bergman, this is Forsberg's thought-provoking 1960s cinematic metaphor with breathtaking imagery and mind-blowing and photography by the distinguished macro-cinematographer Robert Crandall.

Ark (1970) 20 min. — Forsberg's prophetic vision of environmental and spiritual degradation depicts one man's desperate attempt to protect a sealed ecosystem from hostile intruders.

One Friday (1973) 10 min. — A day like any other Friday, only an all-out-race war is underway today and no one in this upscale neighborhood is safe, not even a young child whose purity and innocence serves as counterpoint to the chaotic turmoil unfolding all around him.
